This beautiful house in a beautiful village in Hampshire is well worth a visit.

Gilbert White, curate at Selborne, author of 'The Natural History of Selborne' one of the first ecology books.

Lunch options include a café on site, local pub or coffee shop or bring a picnic. You may want to walk around the village perhaps where Gilbert White himself walked.

The House also has a collection relating to Lawrence Oates a member of Scott's final Antarctic expedition, famous for saying 'I am going outside, I may be sometime' when he realised he was very ill and holding his compatriots up.

Do join us for what should be an interesting and informative day.
